From a ski resort in Auli, the Le Grand in Haridwar, and breweries in Devprayag, to hospitals in Faizabad and factories in Dehradun, Panjwani Architects has been involved in group housing, hotels, hospitals, amusement and water-parks, and tourism related projects. "We have a strong vision to grow further. The uniqueness of our company is our innovative designs with attention to technical details to ease the construction process for the builders, developers and owners." Brij is inspired by nature. "Geometry, balance, scale, proportion, and beauty are all present in nature. We are surrounded by perfect engineering and design. If one observes nature and follows its simple principles, brilliant and functional aesthetics are bound to be achieved."

For Brij, architecture is a fulfilling and satisfying profession as he can see his creative ideas transform from paper models to a concrete structure of brick and mortar. Hence his advice for budding architects is to "love what you create and create what you love. The key is to work hard and keep upgrading your skill set."

His passion for architecture is evident when he says, "I am nearing the age of 60 and am often asked when I plan to retire. But if I have to be honest, my answer would be never. I would want to retire from mundane work, unpleasant circumstances and political gimmicks but I would still want to continue to contribute and share my knowledge and experience."

The firm is now looking to expand, further build up their portfolio, and with the inception of Apt Infrazone (their construction wing for hotels, hospitals and institutional projects), provide a one-stop solution from designing to building. An avid reader, Brij enjoys listening to music and likes to travel when he is not working!
