

all textiles used are luxe; communicating luxury. Most are sensuous satins, intricate exquisite jacquards, the Suraj Pol inspired sheers and Indian silk,” she explains. This is where you will see various manifestations and interpretations of the ‘Tree of Life,’ motif.

The rooms are large and expansive and overlook either the monsoon palace or the gardens of the property. The deluxe rooms are designed with Mewari and modern architecture and have stunning views of the Aravalli hills and are equipped with a king bed and a day bed. Premier rooms have a king bed or twin beds and overlook the swimming pool or the garden and have a comfort sofa and a reading lamp. All rooms have air conditioning, complimentary bottles of mineral water, 42-inch LCD Television with Satellite Cable televisions, iron and ironing board, feather down pillows, minibar, 10 inch snoozer mattress, safety deposit box, tea and coffee maker, unlimited Wi-Fi and more. I stayed in the Suite that interestingly is a huge space across one level. With a large dining table at one end, a cupboard, two sofas, a massive mirror, a large bed, two bathrooms, two televisions, a study desk and more this is all that you could ask for in a room.

And there is more – a huge jacuzzi that overlooks the hills too! The best part is an alcove seating that can actually double
