AND Travel

KOLUKKUMALAI
Imagine sipping a piping hot cuppa on the hills that are home to the highest tea plantation in the world! At Kolukkumalai village in Tamil Nadu, turn this imagination into reality. As you drive uphill from Suryanelli, a distance of around 6 km, the rolling greens of the Kolukkumalai Tea Estate play hide-and-seek with the white mist. Perched at an elevation of about 2400 m, the plantation is a dreamy treat, and located about 35 km from the tourist hotspot Munnar, it's serene and secluded.

At the heart of this green countryside is an old tea factory and you can explore it on a guided tour. Dating back to the 1930s, this two-storeyed factory follows time-tested and traditional methods of tea processing – seven elaborate steps that include withering, rolling, sieving, fermenting, drying, fiber extraction and grading. Savour a steaming cup of fragrant tea and bring back batches as souvenirs of your visit. You can stay in the nearby village and experience one of the most stunning sunrises in this part of the country.

Nothing makes the human soul happier than stepping out of the mundane and exploring the new. So in this month of kinship, here's how you can go off-grid and re-discover the love for travel

Love and travel come in all shapes and forms. There is no one-size-fits-all. It can be the love you have for your family, friends or your significant other, or the adventures you embark on with those loved ones. And while there is little we can offer in terms of how to celebrate your love for everything else, for the hodophiles, we have curated a list of destinations that will satiate the wanderlust and celebrate the love you have for the road!

December to February is the best time to visit

Take note: When you are here, visit the Chinnakanal Waterfalls (about 30 minutes away) that drops from a height of around 600 m. The Pampadum Shola National Park (about three hours away) is home to some endemic species of fauna and flora.

DOOARS

An undisturbed and lush stretch of forest land at the foothills of the eastern Himalayas lies Duar or Dooar, meaning 'door', referring to the region being the gateway to Bhutan from India. Divided by the Sankosh River into the Eastern Dooars (Assam Dooars) and the Western Dooars (Bengal Dooars), this is where you can head to if nature is your calling. The dense forests teem with wildlife, as rolling tea gardens touch the horizon, interlaced by babbling rivers. The region is especially known for its wildlife, some of which you can explore at Jaldapara National Park (the largest such in Dooars), Gorumara National Park, Buxa Tiger Reserve, Chilapata Forest and Chapramari Wildlife Sanctuary. The Jaldapara National Park is home to the rare one-horned rhinoceros along with the Indian bison (gaur), leopards, spotted deer, sambars, hog deer,

The best time to visit Mahabalipuram is from October to February

MAHABALIPURAM (MAMALLAPURAM)

A slice of haven for history, heritage and architecture buffs, Mahabalipuram, known for its group of exquisite rock-cut temples from the 7th and 8th centuries, exudes infinite charm. Famous as a UNESCO World Heritage Site, Mahabalipuram in Tamil Nadu does not disappoint a leisure traveller as well. Sun-kissed beaches, an endless coastline and a strategic location in close proximity to Chennai (around 50 km away) make it a perfect getaway!

One of the most prominent monuments here is the two-towered Shore Temple, overlooking the Bay of Bengal. Believed to be one of the oldest temples in India built out of blocks of granite, it was constructed under king Narasimhavarmam II in the 8th century and symbolises the maritime ambitions of the Pallava dynasty. The pinnacle of Mahabalipuram's stonework, however, is a giant relief carving called 'Arjuna's Penance'. Inscribed on two huge, adjacent boulders, it depicts scenes from Hindu mythology and everyday life. Opposite the compound's northernmost entrance is an enormous boulder - known as 'Krishna's Butterball'. It is one of the most popular spots for photography here. Another fine work of architecture here is the 'Five Rathas' (five chariots), all said to be carved from a single large rock.

GULMARG

It doesn't matter how many images of pristine white Gulmarg you see. Your jaw will still drop at the first sight of the powdery slopes of this scenic valley cocooned by the mighty snow-clad Pir Panjal range. While in summer, it's a dreamland of fresh green meadows carpeted with wild blooms, and lives upto its name "a meadow of flowers", in winter, Gulmarg is magical! Even if you do not ski, there is a lot to enjoy in the white wonderland and its famous slopes. Hike, trek and experience a ride in the gondola, the highest of its kind in the world. Breathe in the fresh crisp air and feast your eyes on the surrounding beauty as the cable car glides above hills and valleys and appears to get lost in mist and clouds! Head to the Gulmarg Biosphere Reserve to see rare species of fauna, flora and avifauna. If you are lucky, you can also spot the shy and endangered musk deer, as well as the red fox. The Alpathar Lake, an ode to nature cocooned by lofty peaks, can be reached via a hike. The reflection of the mountains on the water surface, which freezes over in the colder months, is a sight to behold. The Gulmarg Golf course, said to be the highest in the world, and the Victorian-style St Mary's Church are some places you must bookmark here. While there is a long list of must-dos in Gulmarg, you can choose to just cosy up in a resort by a warm fire and share a few moments of peace!

Check out the Strawberry Valley and live the dream of picking fresh strawberries if you are here between March and July. Pony rides are available within the farms.

Gulmarg is a year-round destination. Visit between December and February to enjoy snow. In summer, experience a pleasant sunny weather and green landscape

CHITRADURGA FORT

Around 200 km from Bengaluru, stands Chitradurga Fort, an offbeat destination that will take you down the pages of history. Life here is centred around the fort, which is believed to be among the country's strongest and famed for its sophisticated water harvesting system. Locally referred to as both elusuttina kote (fort of seven circles) and kallina kote (stone fortress), it once served as the center of Deccan politics. There are several mythologies associated with this place. According to one local lore, a legendary duel between Lord Bhima (one of the Pandava brothers of the Hindu epic Mahabharata) and the man-eating demon Hidimbasura or Hidambasura (as described in the epic) is said to have taken place on its grounds.

Within its precincts are several temples, the most notable among them being the Hidimbeshwara temple, the Venugopal Swamy temple, the Sampige Sideshwara (Siddheshwara) temple and a temple dedicated to the local deity Goddess Ekanteshwari. Both Hidimbeshwara and Sideshwara temples house a piece of bone that are believed to be the tooth of Hidimbasura. A must-see attraction here is the Onake Obavvana Kindi (kindi is the Kannad word for hole). This site is named after a brave woman Obavva and is connected to the historic attack of Hyder (Haidar) Ali on Chitradurga. Records have it that when Hyder's forces could not enter the fort, despite several attempts, they found a narrow crevice that could just barely admit a human. Obavva is said to have hid there, and displaying remarkable courage, grabbed an onake (pestle) and killed every soldier.

MANDARMANI

An endless stretch of sand, countless colonies of sand bubbler crabs painting the golden beach red, and soft waves of the Bay of Bengal gently kissing the shore - all this and more await you at serene Mandarmani. Located in West Bengal's East Medinipur district, Mandarmani is touted to be the longest drivable beach in India. Though, driving is no longer allowed, you can walk or go for a morning jog, as the dawn breaks and fishermen from the nearby village sail in with their pre-dawn haul. You can even buy some of the fresh catch from the fishermen and the kitchen staff at your
